MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Welcome to you all,

I am so happy to welcome you all to the 2022 SDCA conference. After the past two years of social unrest, political controversy, and an ongoing world-wide pandemic it is good to be able to gather in one place and share time together and celebrate that it means to be a counselor.

This year's focus on Culture in a Changing World gives us an opportunity to talk about all the amazing things that counselors do each day for the clients we serve. I found the following definition for culture on the internet,

"Culture can be defined as all the ways of life including arts, beliefs and institutions of a population that are passed down from generation to generation".

In this time of political strife, cancel culture, and conflict that always seems to need to place blame or to minimize one group over another, it is more important than ever that the counseling profession is life and well and working for the benefit of the ALL PEOPLE.

Recently, I was reminded that no one ever asked that their tomb stone read "I wish I had worked more". So, as we come together to learn and celebrate our wonderful profession, take some time for yourself. Sneak off with an old college for a drink and talk. Reconnect with a former instructor or supervisor or college. Engage with presenters to make the process of learning even more fun and interactive. Come out and have a drink and engage you amazing fellow counselors.

I look forward to chatting with old friends, making new friend, and learning from everyone as we continue to build and improve our skills as a counselor.

Duane Kavanaugh, MS, NCC, CCMHC, LPC/MH, QMHP
SDCA President

Healing Trauma: In Our Own Voices

Presenter: Dr. Anne Dilenschneider, Ph.D., QMHP, LPC-MH, LPCC, LMHC

Setting: Clinical

Description: Studies of the biological and psychological nature of trauma reveal that coming out of the protective state of dissociation and into a new consciousness happens through a person's recovery of their voice. In this workshop, participants will learn Carol Gilligan and Kristen Linklater's associative "In Our Own Voices" process. This six-step process is designed to encourage resiliency by reconnecting both clinicians and clients with their bodies and their stories.

People Do That? Exploring the Spectrum of Sexuality

Presenter: Dr. Kristine Ramsay-Seaner, Ph.D., NCC

Setting: Both

Description: Sexuality is a topic that can spark debate, discomfort, and confusion all at once. It is also a reason that clients may seek out professional counseling services. Despite this, many counselors do not receive training related to the topic. This presentation encourages students to explore sexuality as a spectrum reflect on the oppression experienced by those who identify with alternative sexualities. Attendees will learn tips and techniques for engaging in meaningful and safe self-reflection about sexuality as well as explore the necessity of incorporating sexuality in counseling in order to serve the whole client.

During their work in this group, clients are able to build insight into their emotional self, how to manage conflict, set boundaries, face fears, and challenge thoughts in a safe and exploratory environment.

DAKOTA ROOM A/B/C

A School Counseling Classroom Guidance Lesson Addressing Xenophobia in Elementary School Students

Presenter: Dr. Erin Kaszynski, Ph.D., LPC, Kate Campbell, Emily Wheeler, & Sarah Rozell

Setting: School

Description: This program includes a summary of our recent findings from a xenophobia lesson implemented in fourth and fifth grade classrooms. As professionals, it is important for us to contribute to the profession by creating authentic lessons that are socially relevant, and reflect best practices. This is especially important because we are creating a resource for other professionals who may need support and guidance in developing creative classroom activities. Part of a counselor's role is to advocate for the people that they serve. More specifically, a school counselor's role is to advocate for the students. The goal of this research is to advocate for a marginalized population. In more recent years, students have been insensitive to the cultural differences of their peers.

DAKOTA ROOM E

Battling Burnout with Creative Solutions for Youth

Presenter: Megan Miller, LMFT

Setting: Both

Description: In this workshop, we will explore the unmet needs counselors face in their communities as well as how to identify and expand the resources available to youth that exist outside of the direct care of a school counselor. Counselors often feel the weight of ongoing emotional needs. To combat the feelings of depression and overwhelming needs, this presentation will explore creative ways to encourage wellness in our communities and how to share the responsibility of investing and caring for the next generation well.

The Trauma of Racism among Children of Color and Strategies for Post-Traumatic Growth

Presenter: Dr. Erin Kaszynski, Ph.D., LPC

Setting: School

Description: Racism continues to be an issue across the nation and across communities. Whether it is explicitly or implicitly conveyed, it's been deeply felt by generations of people of color. Children learn this through a variety of experiences. However, given our children spend a large amount of time in school, it's important that our school systems develop an understanding of how racism historically and currently impacts children of color, explore how they are presenting in the classrooms, and explore resiliency strategies that support resiliency and post-traumatic growth.

AMPHITHEATER

Eating Disorders and Early Intervention

Presenter: Faith Carlson, MA, LPC, QMHP

Setting: Clinical

Description: Eating disorders often present in subtle behaviors early on in adolescents and teenagers. Current research indicates by the time adolescents present to a primary care doctor for concerns the eating disorder has been going on 3-6 months prior. Eating disorders are the number one cause of death in mental health making early Intervention vital. This workshop assists professionals to detect early symptoms and highlights intervention strategies. Professionals will be provided information on the SCOFF questionnaire, a simple five questions test devised for use by non-professionals to assess the possible presence of an eating disorder. Additionally, support will be discussed on services and resources available if an eating disorder is detected in students and athletes.

Description: This presentation focuses program goals include cultivating knowledge about de-colonization as a process, exploring ways that colonization is reproduced in therapeutic settings, and developing an awareness of indigenized counseling methods. By attending this presentation participants will understand the differences between decolonization, multiculturalism, and indigenization. They will explore decolonization as a personal, experiential process. Finally, attendees will move from discourse into action by learning techniques to indigenize their counseling practice.

SDSU EXTENSION FOCUS GROUP

DAKOTA ROOM A/B/C

As part of the USDA-NIFA Farm and Ranch Stress Assistance Network (FRSAN) grant, personnel in SDSU Extension are conducting a comprehensive needs assessment on farm stress and mental health within agriculture in South Dakota. The needs assessment involves three phases: 1) key informant interviews, 2) focus groups, and 3) surveys. We are currently in phase two. The overall goal of the project is to create an assistance network for farmers, ranchers, and their families in South Dakota.

If you provide mental health services to farmers, ranchers, or their family members (including children), please consider attending the focus group. Facilitators will ask a series of questions related to farm stress and mental health, and participants will engage in a group discussion. This needs assessment is being led by Andrea Bjornestad, Ph.D., LPC, NCC Extension Specialist-Mental Health

A Strength and Wellness-Focused Approach to Suicide Assessment and Intervention

Presented by Dr. Sidney Shaw

(3.0 Contact hours + 1.0 Ethics Contact Hours)

Suicide assessment and treatment planning is generally very stressful for counselors. Counselors can often experience feelings of fear, hopelessness, and narrow focus on pathology along with their clients. This dynamic, hands-on workshop will focus on strength-based and wellness-oriented approaches to suicide assessment and intervention that broaden the lens on working with suicidal clients. Attendees will learn ways to implement this holistic approach into clinical practice. Specifically, content of the workshop will cover 7 dimensions of client distress and resiliency, strength-based interventions, ethical considerations in working with suicidality, as well as empirically supported suicide assessment approaches. Participants will also learn ways to target psychological flexibility as a means to increase client well-being and address suicidality. Finally, the workshop will cover multicultural orientation as framework to promote culturally responsive counseling and treatment planning.

Upon completion of this training, attendees will be able to:

- Identify personal reactions to suicide and identify self-care strategies.
- Learn common and unhelpful myths regarding suicide.
- Describe evidence-based risk/protective factors, warning signs, and cultural issues and how they can be used to deepen empathic understanding of suicidal clients.
- Describe 7 dimensions of client distress and resiliency.
- Learn comprehensive suicide assessment methods and ethical decision-making with suicidal clients.
- Learn evidence-based strategies to promote client well-being through strength-based interventions and promoting psychological flexibility.
- Design a culturally responsive, comprehensive treatment plan for clients experiencing suicidality.

BACKROAD BANDITS

Backroad Bandits are a Duet featuring both male and female vocals performing cover songs of Country and Classic Rock music. From Dolly Parton to Miranda Lambert and Creedence Clearwater Revival to Eric Church and everything in between.

The Marvin Kemp Award for Outstanding Service to the Counseling Profession (Est. 1961)

Marvin Kemp is the father of counseling in South Dakota. His interests were wide and varied, but his concern and dedication were centered in one concept- service to the youth of South Dakota. He began as a teacher at Faulkton High School. He went on to become a principal and superintendent at Faulkton and then at Belle Fourche. His talents were recognized by the Governor and he was selected to become the Secretary of the North Central Association and the State High School Supervisor. He was appointed as the first Director of Guidance for the State of South Dakota and was responsible for bringing guidance and counseling services to students in SD. He was verbal and articulate, a pioneer who instilled in others the heart and the will to provide service to the people of SD. He was the driving force behind the establishment of the SD Personnel and Guidance Association. He called together the first meeting of counselors in the state. Because of him, we exist as an organization.

This award is meant to recognize a counselor who has been involved for a lengthy period of time in the counseling profession- someone who has been involved with the organization and has provided a high level of service both to clients and to fellow counselors. It is meant to be the top award given by our organization.

Mary W. Lark Humanitarian Award (Est. 1982)

Mary Lark came to Rapid City, SD in 1941 as the Dean of Girls at Rapid City High School. Miss Lark always worked as a counselor, but her role as a counselor was officially recognized in the mid 1950's. She epitomized everything that we are taught are the positive characteristics of the perfect counselor. She was a caring, kind, accepting person who had an enormous capacity for hard work, long hours, no complaints, and an exceptional ability to listen. Long after students had graduated from high school, they would return to visit with her. She was everybody's friend and provided comfort and assistance for several generations of high school students.

This award was established to recognize counselors who are true humanitarians- those who go above and beyond the ordinary. The recipient (if they are an ACA member) is then submitted as a candidate for the Gilbert Wrenn Award at the national level. National Winners are noted with an asterisk *

C.J. Peterson Jr. Award (Est. 1973)

C.J. Peterson Jr. was an employment counselor in the Sioux Falls office of the SD Employment Service (Job Service). In 1972, he and his wife were killed in a fire in their home shortly after Christmas. C.J.'s father was a long time employee of the SD Employment Service, having served as a manager of the Hot Springs and the Rapid City offices. So C.J. had a long time commitment to career development and was very concerned with working with people to maximize their potential and to select occupations which were appropriate and right for each individual. He was very interested in helping to establish an Employment Counseling organization and spoke often about the fact that he felt employment counselors must be a part of the SD Personnel and Guidance Association (now the SD Counseling Association).

This award was established to recognize counselors who provide outstanding employment counseling, not necessarily just in employment offices, but to those who deal with the field of employment-vocational rehabilitation counselors, career learning center counselors or others who assist people in choosing careers.

E. Gordon Poling Administrator Award (Est. 1991)

Formally the SDCA Administrator Award

Unpublished material – USD Photograph Collection, Series 9, photograph of Dr. Gordon Poling

E. Gordon Poling was born to a farm family in Iowa and learned early the need for hard work. He sometimes stated that he started work at the age of 13 and never stopped. He spent his early professional career in public school work in Iowa and stated his personal motto as “I have always tried to treat people fairly.” Dr. Poling served the University of South Dakota and future counselor for 29 years. He was chairperson of the Division of Educational Psychology and Counseling from 1979-1990. During his tenure at the University and through his active leadership in the profession in the state and region, he never lost his ability to nurture students and fellow professionals. He was a true counselor educator. Gordon died on August 30th, 1990.

Now you can get exceptional hypnosis training, designed specifically to build the skills you need to deliver real and sustainable results to your clients.

Practical hypnosis is your first step into a complete system of hypnosis, that's been proven effective in successful hypnosis clinics across both the United States and Canada for the last 25 years. This workshop will be entirely experientially based. You're going to focus on learning hypnosis by doing hypnosis on others, and being hypnotized yourself. Through this experience, you'll develop the competence that only comes with real practice on real people.

TRAINERS:

Your trainer for this workshop is Daniel Burow. Daniel is a licensed psychologist and has trained extensively with many of Milton Erickson's personal students. He was trained and supervised by Stephen Gilligan for several years at the beginning of his career and has gone on to train with many of the most effective hypnotists working in the field today.

The special guest trainer for this workshop is Scott McFall. Scott is a hypnosis and NLP trainer with more than four decades of experience in the field. His passion is enriching the skills of those who need to use hypnosis as a tool in their professional work.

LOCATION:

This training will be held in Sioux Falls, South Dakota at the CNA building conference center, 101 South Reid Street. The CNA building is located in downtown, within easy walking distance of four different hotels. The conference space is comfortable and private with excellent parking right across the street.

Space is limited, so contact Sioux Falls Hypnosis today to get signed up for this amazing opportunity at:

All participants will receive a certificate documenting attendance, satisfactory completion, and 18 CE hours.
The training is approved for CE credit by the South Dakota Counseling Association.*

Mavis Booze Mentoring Award (Est. 1999)

Mavis Booze served as a school counselor in South Dakota for twenty-one years. She began her counseling career in Miller in 1975, moving on to Pierre in 1978 to become counselor at Riggs High School. She held the position in Pierre for 18 years before retirement in 1996. Throughout her years, Mavis dedicated a countless number of hours to the counseling profession statewide by serving on numerous boards and committees. Both SDCA and SDSCA have honored her with the highest awards that their organizations have to bestow on their members.

The truly memorable thing about Mavis was her wonderful ability and willingness to help other counselors. Counselors from across the state turned to her throughout the years for support and information, and she always gladly and willingly helped them become more knowledgeable, competent and caring. Mentor, friend, advisor, and role-model- Mavis has been all of these to many people. As a result, as a way of honoring her, it seems only fitting that the Mavis Booze Mentoring Award be given annually to recognize a counselor who shares willingly and enthusiastically what they know with others.

Mavis, a longtime active member of both the South Dakota Counseling Association and the South Dakota School Counselor Association, passed away on June 21st, 1998 following a long battle with cancer.

Strengthening the Heartland invests in the wellness of rural communities across the Dakotas through mental health resources and educational materials.

We offer high quality, hands-on, and FREE trainings for counselors, social workers, and educators. In the last year alone, we've offered over 60 CE hour opportunities through the NBCC. Our programming ranges in topics from resilience, suicidality in youth, gaming addiction, grief, mindfulness, and much more.

We want to support you in your work of helping these communities thrive. Sign up for our event updates at:
